The Boathouse

Cooper Residence

The Landing Bay of Islands

Set on 1000-acres on the tip of the Purerua Peninsula, The Landing offers the ultimate luxury getaway. Described by Barack Obama as “magical” in its guest book, the property comprises six private beaches, an award-winning vineyard, lush wetlands and four boutique houses — each with its own character and charm. From the Cooper Residence — a modern, five-bedroom ode to the traditional New Zealand farmhouse, perfect for those looking to host and available with an on-site private chef — to The Boathouse — a striking, contemporary structure located close to the water’s edge, with room to entertain around 20 guests — the idea behind The Landing is to make its visitors feel instantly at home.

Once that’s happened, guests are able to choose from a number of activities designed to see them make the most of the land. Guided evening walks, for example, will see visitors invited to spot one of New Zealand’s native birds. Sightseeing cruises around the bay will ensure guests don’t miss out on the all-encompassing beauty of the area. While gyms, tennis and basketball courts, and off-the-jetty fishing are just a few minutes from each of The Landing’s homes.

One experience to not pass up is a visit to The Landing’s newly-opened boutique winery, located onsite. A particularly good thing to do in winter (when sunbathing and water sports are not as appealing), the winery focuses on innovation and sustainability, producing 4,000 cases per year, and a tour of its grounds will see guests weave through the established vines before enjoying a tasting experience of The Landing’s critically-acclaimed wines.

With special accommodation on offer over the winter months, including an enticing three-nights-for-two weekender and a Residences By Room option (where guests can book one of the houses only by the number of rooms they need), a mid-year vacation in Northland has never been a more appealing prospect.
